Shahjehan S. Karim
Founder-President

The morning of July 17, 2017 brought a pall of sadness for all the students, teachers, and staff members connected with the Institute of Business Management (IoBM). One of Pakistan’s most prestigious centers of higher education had lost its nucleus, and its founder.

Founder-President, the late Mr. Shahjehan S. Karim left for his heavenly abode on that day, but not before making thousands of lives better with his colossal contributions towards Pakistan, and the world at large. During his 37 year association with the Civil Service, he served across several districts, and held senior positions in the Federal Government, as well as the Government of Sindh, from where he retired as its Chief Secretary. He also served as an international civil servant with Habitat – a United Nations agency committed to the development of “socially and environmentally sustainable human settlements”, and “adequate shelter for all”. Mr. Shahjehan S. Karim was also a fellow of the Economic Development Institute of the World Bank.

In 1995, he established the College of Business Management (CBM) that soon stood shoulder to shoulder with the best business schools in the country. His lofty ideals and powerful vision transformed it into a multidisciplinary, degree-awarding, center of excellence - the Institute of Business Management (IoBM), comprising four constituent colleges, the College of Economic and Social Development (CESD), the College of Computer Science and Information Systems (CESD), the College of Engineering and Sciences (CES), in addition to CBM.

His dedication to the cause of promoting quality education and academic excellence was combined with his mission to create broad-based scholarship, and provide support to the underprivileged members of our society. He firmly believed that no one who qualified on merit should be denied education for their inability to pay its cost. With this spirit, he initiated the Outreach Program, which has already enabled deserving and meritorious students from the outlying districts of Sindh and Balochistan to receive education at IoBM, and will continue to do so in future.

The truth of his passing has affected us all, not only at a symbolic level but also at a personal level. We earnestly pray to the Almighty to grant him an elevated status in Jannah!
STUDENT SOCIETY ACTIVITIES

Photography Exhibition & Contest ‘17

The IoBM Media Society made a comeback with the relaunch of one of its flagship events, the Photography Exhibition & Contest. The theme for the three-day event this year was ‘Karachi 360’ where various pictures exploring the K-town were put up. Students within the university, as well as outside the university, were encouraged to participate. The contest was judged by Tayyab Javeri, Yousuf Bashir Qureshi and Danial Shah, and the winners were presented with trophies.

SWAT’s Ramadhan Drive and Sports Day

Given the reputation it has, the IoBM Social Welfare and Trust Society was in the news throughout the first half of 2017. This year SWAT arranged the biggest and most effective Ramadhan Drive where it served more than 10,000 people and distributed 400 ration bags and 100 pairs of eid clothes for the orphans. Moreover, SWAT also arranged its 6th Annual Sports Day on March 23, 2017, where the team members of the society brought the under-privileged an opportunity to enjoy the essence of the Resolution Day through a sports festival.

CBMUN

The IoBM Literary and Public Speaking Society launched its signature event ‘CBMUN’ with a bang! The event fulfilled both educational and entertainment purposes, and was highly popular among the students. The three-day event encompassed a range of entertaining activities, such as a concert where Umair Jaswal performed, and the Muniheno Carnival and Bonfire. The event concluded with a formal dinner.

ZENITH

ZENITH Leadership and Development Conference held by the IoBM Strategic and Human Resource Society hosted the greatest number of participants this year. The three-day event comprised of guest speakers, trainings and several other team-building activities.

Brand Mania

The IoBM Marketing Society brought a brand new event this year called Brand Mania. The society called it ‘a platform to charm your talent in the business world’. There were twenty teams that took part and competed against each other in two rounds. Along with the competition, Mishal and Nihal talk about their experiences in Spikes Asia and NUS.

IoBM GOES GLOBAL

MISHAL RAFIQ BBA (H)

Mishal Rafiq was the only student from IoBM to get the opportunity to attend the Spikes Asia Festival of Creativity, which took place in Singapore from 27 - 29, September, 2017. Here's how she describes her experience.

"It was one of the most unique and amazing experiences I had! Coming from a business background it opened my mind to numerous creative possibilities of idea creation and generation which would lead towards innovation and elaborate how the world's progressing towards Artificial Intelligence. Different speakers from all around the world came and shared their experiences and work which was immensely inspirational and surprising in regard to what the world is moving towards.

Not only their work but the success story behind every person gave me goosebumps, yet motivated me extremely. Discussions about passion, creativity, self confidence, fear and failure, CGI, AI, future outcomes, communication and so much more cleared my mind of any confusion and made my goals firm.

The thing i enjoyed the most was networking with so many beautiful individuals who belonged from four countries - all over Asia, these type of bonds last forever, and also gives you a vast understanding of everyone's mindsets and celebrates team work!"

NIHAL FAISAL BBA (H)

Nihal was one of the 15 students to get selected all over Pakistan for the NUS (National University of Singapore) Summer Program 2017.

One day prior to our departure, our batch visited Google Singapore; Yes! you heard it right! Google was full of astonishing architecture, free food for its employees, gaming area, nap room and a salon. The company pampers its employees well!

To sum it up, this excursion was a life-changing experience for me. Each moment spent in Singapore turned out to be worth cherishing! To all the readers: if you find an opportunity like this in your life, do not think twice and just take it!"
NO HOSTEL VETERANS AT IoBM?

Arbab Ibrahim

Since IoBM does not have a hostel and most of the students come from Karachi, it is safe to assume that most do not know much about the amazing life of a Hostelite. Most people I have talked to, know about hostel life from movies like "Taare Zameen Par" and "3 Idiots".

Hostel life, as any Hostelite will tell you, is an important part of any student's life. It is said that there's no place like home, but once you get used to hostel life, there's no going back. Hostel life inculcates many qualities in a person - among them self-dependency and discipline rank as the two most important ones.

In a hostel, you are your own boss and there is nothing or nobody to restrict you from doing things - except for hostel rules, and that domineering (but malleable) hostel supervisor. You can get away without cleaning your room, skipping a shower for three days in a row, and staying up all the night to talk to your "beloved" on your phone. However, you have to forget that you own anything. Your toothpaste, books, laptop, toilet, clothes, shampoo, cash or even your room - nothing is your own.

The most exciting part of living in a hostel is the acceptance of diversity as a way of life! A hostel brings together people from different backgrounds and ethnicities, people with different beliefs and customs - enabling them to know each other, respect each other, and live in harmony. Living with people for as long as you do in a hostel, does not just turn them into your friends, but make them part of your own family.

I classify "Hostelites" into five broad categories or genres, from the point of their disposition, and not their creed:

1. The Dominating Ones: They're always telling you what you should do and always get their way at "public welfare decisions" (lights out hours, study time, the daily/ weekly menu).

2. The Home-sick Ones: They're mostly sad and talk less. The times that they are in a group, you see them whining about how 'different' and 'better' it is at home.

3. The Party Freules: They're always ready for a bash - and a bash for them anytime, anywhere. The good thing is that they know people at every university or college - their "contacts" - and "can get things done" whatever that means.

4. The Misers: They always show up but never pay up. They are tight-fisted. And watch them raise hell when you accidentally misplace anything that is theirs and that you may have borrowed.

5. Those who have been there for the past six years: They are the ones who've seen everything, done everything, know everything, and slept the most - the one they are fuzzy about is how do you get out of this place? Yet, students respect them for their advice on every aspect of hostel life. If it's about books, their favorite line is: "Let me sleep over it!"

While hostel life is fun in its essence, it comes with its own set of challenges. All the "mumma ka ladlas" and the "papa ki princesses", who find their clothes hanging outside their closet in the morning, at home, are seen washing them, drying them, pressing them, and cleaning their rooms as well.

You have to eat the food that is cooked, or cook your own food once the cook is done. You can get a friend to help you, but only once in a while. You could order something from a deli, but if you do, you won't have enough money left for the "other things" you want to do.

Hostel life does make you street smart - you have a 'jugaad' for everything. No electricity? Fear not, fill a pot with hot water - it works the same way as the electric iron on your jeans! Too lazy to wash your dishes...? Wrap a plastic sheet over one and have your meal anyway!

There is that odd chance as well in a hostel that you may go astray. You are not under the watchful eyes of your parents - the ones who will always give you honest advice, and give you love and affection. Homelinesickness is a major issue among people living in a hostel. In the absence of that ring of light above your head, and the misfortune of finding a fiendish friend, you may start neglecting your studies and ultimately lose your way.

However, as a former Hostelite, let me just say: "Jaha hostel che nai reya, O jamya e nail!"
If IoBM was anything other than a university, it would definitely be a busy food street.

THE NEVER ENDING FOOD FEST AT IoBM

Tooba Hameed

IoBM is a place where you can experience a vast variety of friends, teachers, grades, and of course the most important of all: “FOOD!” James Beard, an American cook once said, “Food is our common ground, a universal experience.”

If IoBM was anything other than a university, it would definitely be a busy food street. That is because like any other famous food street, it has a variety of “food joints” enough to put every student in a “quandary” every single day: what should I eat today?

First in line comes the old and new Cafeteria, which has everything to eat – from halwa puri for breakfast to biryani or haleem at lunch time. Mid-day snacks like channa chaat, pizzas, lime and even ice-cream are in fact what these cafeterias are majorly famous for. If you come to the Cafeteria during lunch time, it’s almost impossible to find a table.

Whereas the Cafeterias offers a large variety of traditional food, Bistro and La Fire provides a wide range of fast food including burgers, fries and more. The latter food outlet may appear fairly compact, its benefits are precisely the opposite. There is always a large crowd waiting in front of the counter throughout the day, either to collect their food order, or place another. Masala fries dipped in ketchup are the most popular option on Eatables’ extensive menu, starting at an affordable serving for Rs. 40. Other items on their menu include double decker beef burgers, crispy chicken burgers, and chicken and chips, to name just a few. The Chai Junction, on the other end of the Student Activity Center (more popularly known as SAC), is the perfect place to start your university mornings. The group of pathans behind the counter give you the real feel of a dhaba, both with their food and the casual ambiance of the area.

For all the tea lovers, this is the place to be. The Junction offers an interesting variety of teas, including doodh patti, elaichi chai, sabz chai, etcetera. To put a cherry on the top, they make the most amazing nutella paratha, which tastes like it has been sent down straight from the heaven.

But, wait. For all the health conscious people in IoBM, there are other options such as La-Farine, Hangouts and even the shawarma joint which serves its shawarma in bran bread with customized shawarma rolls for the ones on diet. La-Farine is always a plus point for you, since celebrating birthdays in university is a trend. Not only do they have cakes in various flavors, but also brownies and cupcakes, all at reasonable prices. So any day you feel like you need to satisfy your sweet tooth, you now know where to go!
HERE’S THE POINT REGARDING THE POINT

Mahnoor Aslam

▲ Students waiting for their points to leave

While some people find it convenient to travel in their own cars, others prefer to use the transportation facility provided by IoBM. The riding experience may differ for each one of us, where one might find the odyssey exciting, and at the same time, daunting for someone else. When most people think about an eventful or memorable place, they almost certainly would not picture a bus. From keeping a track of the drivers to making sure that you get a seat beside the window for taking in a reasonable amount of oxygen, the course could sometimes be exhausting. But the ‘point’ in IoBM is a world on its own.

While the only perk acknowledged by the currently enrolled students was the “low fee” factor of the subsidized service, when asked, the alumni could not resist from reminiscing over the valuable time they had spent as a family with their fellow seniors.

"Made the most amazing friends in point. Used to talk on almost everything together. Once it was raining heavily and we went to have chaat, samosas and ice-cream. Every now and then, we used to have samosa party and used to get treated by our seniors. Loved the experience." - Eraj Husnain

On interviewing some of the senior van drivers about what benefits they get out of the subsidized fee rates, this is what they had to say:

“The transportation facility at IoBM is supervised by a contractor who gets paid by the IoBM’s management. For instance, if a student pays Rs: 4600/- as their fees per semester, in return the management pays Rs: 9200/- to the contractor and this is how students are provided with the subsidiary rates.

This way, Alhamdulillah, even we are able to earn a sufficient amount of Rs: 35k-38k per month, and for me this much is enough for a respectable living, while many of us use our private vans, others are owned by the contractor and are given under drivers’ use, and private vans are preferably sent to cover the long routes.” - Mr Abdul Qadir Jhangir.

That adrenaline rush when you sprint towards the bus with the fear of running late, since the drivers are always in an urgency, is what lingers around in your mind even when you have graduated. If all goes well and you are lucky enough to survive all the other challenges, then the bus ride is sure to become a pleasant experience, from listening to songs while awaiting your stops to getting a ‘point party’ organized by the seniors.

On the whole, the point experience holds a special place in the hearts of many who use it, not only because it helps them socialize, but also due to the fact that it opens them up to a variety of people, preparing them for the professional life that is yet to commence.
IoBM’s Jashan-e-Baharan’17 undeniably created a stir on the social media following the success of the event. While there was an outpour of positivity for the management of the concert, on the other side, there were many who expressed unpleasant experiences that they had on the event day. The concert was arranged by IoBM’s Entertainment Plus Society (EPS) at the end of the Spring semester in 2017. The pre-event excitement was hard to conceal. Students were absolutely thrilled to experience the two most celebrated singers of Pakistan and this excitement was doubled by the loud speakers kept inside the Student Activity Center before the event, where songs like ‘Hum kis gali ja rahe hain’ and ‘Channo ki ankh main’ were played continuously.

On the revelation of the two major artists performing at the event, Atif Aslam and Ali Zafar, even the people who were unsure about attending the event initially were found standing in the queue eager to get a pass for themselves. Every single person was found humming to the lyrics of their favourite tunes by the two singers, and the buzz elevated the activity that EPS aimed to create.

Then came the main event, which was a concert scheduled at BPM on a Friday night. Everyone had something interesting to say about the extravagant night. “As I entered the campus that day, I was in awe. The crowd in front of me was a mixture of leather jackets, boots and smoky eyes,” said Sania, one of the spectators of the concert. Excitement was another feature evident on most of the faces seen that day.

Although the concert officially started at 9PM, the actual event began when the artists arrived later into the night. The event kicked off with Ali Zafar singing a hit number back from 2003, ‘Huqa Paani’ reminding almost everyone of the good old days. Songs, however, were not the only interesting entertainment at the Jashan. There were also several food stalls selling food and drinks of various kinds, where most of the students were found hanging around as they waited for the lead singers to arrive.

However, things started to go down hill soon when, once the tempo rose students were not allowed to come up close to their favorite stars. This was quite a downer and everyone started to put it on the organizers’ decision to have a VIP section right in front of the stage, where only a limited number of people were seated. Many enthusiastic spectators complained that they were not able to catch a good glimpse of their favorite stars. As a consequence, a large number of disgruntled audience went on social media to spilt out their anger and express their utter disappointment.

This issue was also highlighted by Ali Zafar himself on Facebook. He wrote a post addressed the organizers of the event, and pleaded the case for the real audience. “It is my humble request to you then not to have this VIP area in front of the stage and instead allow the real audience, the students and fans, to be in the front and center.”

What added fuel to the fire was the exchange of vitriolic comments that took place following the star’s post. Sides were taken and Facebook felt like a war zone, where many expressed their disappointment and agreed with the singer that the unfair seating arrangement was the reason of their disappointment, which also came in the way of them having a good time at the concert.

However, despite the controversies, EPS stood strong and boldly faced the “music” that came their way from all quarters. The office-bearers remained polite, and kept tendering their apology – as a consequence, the criticism died down.

Sure there were lessons learnt by EPS at that event that could help them plan their events better in future. After all, as someone said, Each failure makes you stronger, bigger and better.

Pain is something that turns you into a stronger human being, with a more refined and resolute perspective on life.

LESSONS FOR LIFE

Komal Farooq

At some point in life, it is inevitable that the challenges you face make you feel like life is just getting you down. Whatever it may be, you get the feeling that the harder you slam a ball into the ground, the higher it bounces back up.

Pain is one of the most feared experiences in the human mind. People who have dealt with pain say that “it breaks you, knocks the wind out of you, makes you feel as if your insides are being wrenched out” - and depending on its severity, it leaves behind scars deep, deep inside you.

Yet in some situations, pain is something that turns you into a stronger human being, with a more refined and resolute perspective on life. Because let’s face it - if there’s no pain in this world, how would you feel relieved and emancipated? How would you emerge as a liberated soul with a clear vision of your life?

The year was 2016, a testing time for me - academically, emotionally and financially! It was the toughest year of my life. It felt as if I had lost control over my entire being, and everything around me.

Event after event that unfolded in my life left me totally dumbfounded, and stuck in time. That particular year I found myself completely, totally, utterly left alone. I saw many of my good friends distance themselves from me. I experienced numerous anxiety attacks and severe bouts of depression. To make matters worse I also lost several of my close relatives that year, to the bitter reality called “death”. As a consequence, my grades started to slide downwards, at a time when I was supposed to shine.

I wouldn’t say that I was a brilliant student, but proving my mettle was something I had always yearned for.

That is why people say what they should not be saying. That is why mischief-mongers spread falsehoods. Pay no heed to them, for they do not wish you well – who knows you better than you? Life is not a bed of roses: Often quoted, often ignored, it is an antidote when times get tough. It does not make sense when you see your entire world falling apart.

“Can it be happening to me?” you ask yourself. Why seek refuge in your self-created bubble? Why not accept, make amends, and move on?

Be grateful at all times: That is what our elders say — “Allah blesses each one of us in mysterious ways.” Sure, if we knew what good may come out of a bad situation, it would be easy to keep hold on our life. But then we don’t — so be content! Be content with what you have, take a deep breath, and thank God for it. In no time you will feel happiness take you in its arms.

Love your parents: Parents may be a generation adrift but their love does not reside in any particular time-zone. They would come across and hold you in their arms. They would take away a large part of your problems - if only you believe they will. Show them respect and see how they respond. Love them, for that is all they expect.

At the end of the day, you are your own hero: Why wait for someone else to discover your talents, and turn you into a “hero”? Why wait for another person to put you on your back, and say well done – acknowledgement never comes easy. Discover your own strengths, pat yourself on your back, and see your confidence grow. Be your own hero!
Love Yourself The Way You Are

Hina Maqbool

That pretty hair and beautiful looks will not make you pretty so far
Oh girl, please! Like your scars, love yourself the way you are

Don't try to change your physique if you don't want it by your heart
Oh girl, Please! Like your body, love yourself the way you are

Don't fight for the fair complexion which you can't gain, be elegant as you are
Oh girl, Please! End this fairness charade, love yourself the way you are

Don't give people a chance to mock you, on how they see you!

See yourself the way you ought to be seen,
love yourself the way you are.
